

The Daily Prophet

Vol. MCCCXIII No. CCXIII

July 21, 2007

Brick Farm Ice Cream Serving Hogwarts Students' Favorite Flavors

by Rita Skeeter

Since the disappearance of Florean Fortescue, and the subsequent closure of his ice cream parlor in Diagon Alley, this delectable summer treat has become difficult to find. The Daily Prophet has learned from an anonymous source however that during this summer holiday, Hogwarts students are traveling to Unity, New Hampshire to get their favorite ice cream treats. The best seller to Hogwarts students is reportedly Molly's Treacle Fudge. Other top sellers include Riddikulus Raspberry, Quidditch Cup Custard, and Accio Pistachio. Many witches seem to be especially fond of Centaur Coconut Hooves. Even the house elves have their own treat in Dobby's Cream Dream. It is reported that house elves there actually make a sorcerer's cone, a conical-shaped, edible dish dipped in melted chocolate frogs and rolled in rainbow whizzies. Some believe such a device is full of Dark Magic, meant to lure impressionable young wizards and witches to the side of You-Know-Who.

Ministry of Magic officials have not been able to identify how the students are managing to get there. Most students have not yet earned their license to apparate. According to Percy Weasley, Ministry official, "The floo network remains under surveillance, so we know that this is not their mode of travel. We believe they are using a port key, but have not been able to identify the item as of yet. Anyone noticing any unusual behavior or gatherings of underage wizards is urged to contact the Ministry."

The Daily Prophet has been unable to make contact with anyone at Brick Farm Ice Cream, apparently located in a remote muggle neighborhood.